65-67 Laussat Street is located on a 25' x 48.34' lot on the south side of Laussat Street. It is a 2-and-a-half story, wood-frame residential building designed in the Classical Revival style. The rectangular-plan building is clad in wood bevel siding and is capped by a front gable roof clad in asphalt shingles. The primary window type is a one-over-one, double-hung, wood sash with lambs tongues. These windows can be found on a shallow bay window on the west side of the first story level, and on two bay windows at the second story level. The primary entry is located at the east side of the front façade and consists of two glazed wood panel doors within an inset vestibule. The opening of the vestibule is flanked by Ionic columns and a prominent entablature. The moldings of this entablature continue over the neighboring bay window, which is relatively simple in its detailing. Both the entry and the bay window are overhung by the bay windows of the second story, which are more ornate in their detailing. The windows are flanked by engaged colonettes, have wall panels below adorned with garland motifs, and are surmounted by a frieze with rosettes. Another piece of trim, featuring reeding and small medallions, runs under the frieze, (continued) between and on either side of the bay windows. The second story is overhung by the pedimented gable end, which features a pair of wood, double-hung widows. The top sashes of these windows have a Tudor arch shape and both sashes are glazed with stained Queen Ann windows. The windows are flanked by fluted pilasters and the mullion dividing the two windows is also fluted and topped with a Corinthian capital. A dentil molding adorns the overhanging edge of the gable end and is paired with a heavy rake molding to emphasize the edges of the gable end and separate the lower portion of the gable from the area at the peak, which has a blank wall surface and a delicate applied medallion. The secondary elevations of the house are clad in asbestos shingle. The house appears to be in good condition.
