PLAY STREETS

- RETURN STREETS TO THEIR ROLE AS URBAN "FRONT-YARDS," PLACES FOR CHILDREN TO PLAY
- PROMOTE COMMUNITY ENGAGEMENT
- MOST APPROPRIATE FOR DEAD-END OR QUIET STREETS

LIVING ALLEYS

- CREATE SAFE, GREEN, ATTRACTIVE, AND ACTIVE PUBLIC SPACES FOR PEOPLE
- SUPPORT COMMUNITY ACTIVITIES
- TYPICALLY INCORPORATE SUSTAINABLE DESIGN

GREEN CONNECTIONS

- CALM, GREEN STREETS THAT PROMOTE ACTIVE TRANSPORTATION AND STORMWATER MANAGEMENT
- INCORPORATE A VARIETY OF GREEN STREET DESIGN IMPROVEMENTS AND DETAILS

SLOW ZONES

- EMPHASIZE SLOW VEHICLE SPEEDS AND SAFETY FOR ALL USERS, ESPECIALLY THE MOST VULNERABLE
- PROVIDE GATEWAY TREATMENTS
- CALM STREETS, AND PROVIDE UNIQUE IDENTITY

How can we improve the public realm so it's healthier/safer for those who have to live there (i.e. the homeless)? Can we link any existing homeless support services to those various public realm improvement projects? Maybe financial incentives for homeless to build/plant green infrastructure, help with litter control etc.

Or... how can we make better use of rooftop space in the city? Is there a way to create more public realm this way? Or at least we could incentivize better use, such as green roofs, food production, water collection, energy production, leisure space, white roofs, etc. How about a High Line / Promenade Plantee that weaves across the top of buildings throughout the neighborhood, like a new layer of public space on top of private space. Ok, too far? ☺

Isn't this already in practice, for the most part? This neighborhood isn't a vehicular through-fare, but a ped + bike destination. Design public realm infrastructure elements to help foster this unique identity - no other neighborhood is better suited in SF!
